NARRATING DEATH

NARRATING DEATH

Cuadernos
VOLUME I, ISSUE 2

This cuaderno was developed for the
Manitos Community Memory Project

The word obituary signals a final reflection and departure of the dead and comes from Medieval Latin obituarius, “a record of the death.” Contemporary obituaries are thus literary testaments, narrating as much about death as they do the life now passed. The recovery of Manito obituaries therefore reveals an important genre of writing and an important part of what is core to the memory project.

The periodistas, the Spanish language journalists of New Mexico recognized the importance of publishing these ‘records of death’ for others to read and remember. The value was primarily for those left behind and for those of us recognizing this legacy.

During the 1918 Spanish Flu, there were hundreds impacted in the villages of northern Taos County, not all of whom were given an obituary. La Revista de Taos did publish some obituaries as they were received. On November 22, 1918, a whole page was devoted to accounting for those who had succumbed to death, from a soldier serving in far away France to a young mother in the village. The accounts of those twenty lives follow, as transcribed from La Revista de Taos and translated.

Mr. Editor — I beg you kindly to give place in your bright columns of your newspaper to the death of Loreta Romero de Montaño caused by the Spanish influenza that put her in bed for four days. Her death was peaceful. She died at her residence on Monday, January 18, at 12 pm, trusting in her Savior Jesus, at the age of 54 years, one month and three days. She left her husband Melquiades Montaño and 6 living children, 3 married daughters, two unmarried and an unmarried son in a wealth of grief to mourn his death. In her life she was a true Christian; industrious and active in-home businesses. Diligent in cultivating her land and raising her animals, hospitable and loving in visiting and helping her sick neighbors. On the 19th at 4 p.m. we celebrated her funeral in the presence of a good number of relatives and friends. Following the funeral, we placed her remains in the Taos association cemetery, next to the grave of my mother Teodora Romero, her grandmother. There, surrounding her grave, we had her last funeral rites. Where she sleeps in Jesus and rests in peace, waiting for the glorious morning of the Resurrection, where her corruptible body will be transformed and raised in incorruption. To adore, honor, praise and glorify the name of your Redeemer and Benefactor Jesus, Amen. V.F. Martínez and Romero.

The Manitos Cuaderno Series began in the summer of 2020 to tell stories about sickness and wellness from the Spanish Flu of 1918 to the COVID-19 pandemic of 2020. The word cuaderno comes from the Latin quaternus and means a set of folded sheets of paper that form a book, a notebook. Historically, leatherbound cuadernos have been used to record celestial movements of the sun, moon and the stars as well as the accountings upon the ground, the movement of livestock, of waters and of the harvest. Clerics and Hermanos scripted upon the pages of these notebooks the prayers, dreams and mysteries, both joyful and sorrowful. Mothers, fathers, sons and, daughters recorded marriages, births and, in between the lines of these books, captured those poignant moments when people closed their eyes forever. The recollections made with ink and paper are as old as time and span across global geographies; they are the stories of community. As they have done globally, these cuadernos have recorded the experiences and histories of Manitos living in villages throughout northern New Mexico and southern Colorado and places to where they migrated. Collectively, these recordings represent a part of an archive, a community's repository that reflects upon the past, but as a living community, its present and future as well.

Publication Date: January 2021
